Turning your travels INTO GOLD

Thank you for considering Luxury Gold for your future travels.

As a passionate traveller myself, I believe that although the world has changed, our desire to explore and connect remains.

I am confident that we can navigate this new world together, and you can rest assured that as our guest, your well-being always has been, and always will be, our top priority.

By nature, travel is dynamic, ever-changing and evolving. I can attest to that personally, having worked in travel for over 20 years, and I take great pride in being part of a family-run company that has been in business for over 100 years.

We attribute our success and longevity to our financial stability (we're completely debt-free) and to our commitment to innovation (knowing when to change our practices to keep up with the world around us).

In addition to the benefits of travelling with Luxury Gold that our guests have come to love, we're taking new steps to enhance our hygiene protocols and improve physical distancing to give you peace of mind during your travels. You can read more about these developments at luxurygold.com/well-being.

Despite everything that's changed, from speaking to our guests and partners it's clear that the spirit of travel lives on! It seems like we can't wait to get back to exploring the world, making new friends, and supporting communities on the road to recovery.

I hope that as you turn the pages of this magazine, you can immerse yourself in the stories and experiences of each destination, so you can dream of your next journey with us.

At the time that's right for you, we look forward to once again turning your travels into gold.

Stay healthy, stay safe, and take care,

ULLA HEFEL BÖHLER – CEO

Dear future guest,

We invite you to discover our family's legacy in travel and join one of our luxury journeys.

Our heritage in luxury hospitality begins with Red Carnation Hotels. Bea Tollman, my partner in life and business for over 65 years, serves as Founder and President, bringing her extraordinary vision, culinary genius, and incomparable attention to those tiny noticeable touches that make guests feel truly welcome.

Bea is also the guiding visionary behind Uniworld River Cruises, each ship a floating boutique hotel which, through her efforts, are as beautifully appointed and welcoming as those of Red Carnation.

As if that wasn't enough, it was Bea's spirit and our shared love of travel that led me to found Luxury Gold. We believe that the greatest journeys in life blend carefully planned activities with unexpected discoveries and we created Luxury Gold to do just that.

The planning has been going on for over 100 years, first with my parents and continuing with Bea and me. We have spent our lives discovering our favourite destinations around the world and meeting the people who will welcome you on your holiday.

The unexpected discoveries happen throughout your journey, with plenty of time and space to personalise to your passions, interests, curiosity, tastes and whims – all crafted in real time by your Travelling Concierge.

The resulting journey is extraordinary – turning your travels into gold. We can't wait to welcome you on your journey.

I make sure to learn little details about guests so I can acknowledge them personally and incorporate something into the journey for them. They spent some time trading stories about cooking around the world and how you can work alongside different cultures, learning things that enrich a recipe from different countries.

INTRODUCING OUR AMBASSADORS

We are proud to partner with the TreadRight Foundation, a not-for-profit organisation created as a joint initiative between The Travel Corporation's (TTC) family of brands. At TreadRight, our mission is to Make Travel Matter; and we are committed to making a positive impact on the communities we visit.

We work together with our ambassadors, Céline Cousteau, Ami Vitale and Sarain Fox, to help raise awareness of our inspiring projects around the world and how travellers can make a difference. Read on for some sustainable travel tips from these extraordinary women.

SUSTAINABILITY FOR SURVIVAL

STORY BY CÉLINE COUSTEAU, DOCUMENTARY FILMMAKER

Leading environmentalist and explorer, Céline has been highlighting various sustainable travel topics and showcasing amazing projects helping to protect ecosystems all over the world through her films. She has been TreadRight's Planet Ambassador since 2015.

I believe that the travel industry has tremendous potential for positive impact. From the companies that provide journeys, to the hotels and dining experiences, there are opportunities to become more sustainable and enable travellers to make better choices.

There are many things that you can do to make a difference when you travel. The number one thing I tell people is: don't use single use plastic. If possible, bring your own refillable bottles and sustainable cutlery so that you can reduce the amount of waste left behind. Then you don't need to think of how it's disposed – you have broken that part of the chain.

I encourage people to hear the stories of local projects, discover what different communities are doing to protect our planet. If you can get involved and understand what people are doing, you can see where we, as humans can make a difference.

REUSEABLE WATER BOTTLES

Working toward our long-term goal of removing single-use plastics from our operations, we're proud to provide Luxury Gold guests with elegant, reusable water bottles so you can stay hydrated the environmentally friendly way. We commit to providing potable drinking water for you along your journey in a sustainable way.

I encourage people to hear the stories of local projects, discover what different communities are doing to protect our planet. If you can get involved and understand what people are doing, you can see where we, as humans can make a difference.

A PASSION TO UPLIFT AND REPRESENT INDIGENOUS PEOPLE

STORY BY SARAIN FOX, ARCHIVIST, BROADCASTER AND ANISHINAABE DANCER

Sarain Fox gives voice to indigenous people and their stories with the goal of preserving their culture and connecting all people. Born in Batchawana First Nation in Canada, Sarain is one of the country's most prominent indigenous voices.

Two great examples where TreadRight is making a difference are the projects in Peru and Italy, where we support the Centro de Textiles Tradicionales del Cusco and Laboratorio Giuditta Brozzetti. Both organisations are run by women to help keep their own traditions of weaving alive, teach visitors of their history, value and beauty, and employ locals to carry on the work.

Tourism can improve employment, especially for young women. It can give voice to those who are usually underrepresented. Being able to express themselves and keep their culture alive is fantastic, and it also changes how you, as the traveller, perceive the land and its people. You connect on a deeper level.

The narrative that is told about a place is so powerful. Hang out with the locals, learn about their culture and learn about their challenges. Travel like you're about to meet the most incredible person you've ever met and that they'll teach you something new. Travel with an open heart and listen.

TELLING POWERFUL STORIES THROUGH IMAGERY

STORY BY AMI VITALE, AWARD-WINNING NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC PHOTOGRAPHER

Awarded "Best Image of the Decade" for her depiction of the final moments of a northern white rhino, former war photographer Ami Vitale captures compelling stories of wildlife and nature on film. Ami has travelled to over 100 countries and is committed to making a profound difference to the future of conservation.

There isn't just one thing you can do for the planet, there are many things, but one of those has to be choosing travel companies that offer ethical experiences. Supporting companies that choose sustainability means prolonging the existence of certain species.

Loving wildlife translates to giving them respect. By all means, take the photo and tell the story, but remember that you are in that creature's habitat. Don't make contact as this can cause the animal stress or put them in danger.

Poaching isn't slowing down. It's all our responsibility to stop animals from becoming extinct. When certain species die out, it has an enormous impact on our ecosystem, so we have to seek honed solutions, as TreadRight is doing, to change that. There's no time left to be indifferent, we are in a race to save these animals, and our planet, right now. ■

BOUNDLESS PERU

Story by: Ulla Hefel Böhler, CEO, Luxury Gold

Peru holds a wealth of wonderfully preserved monuments and magnificent landscapes that lure in travellers. Our Luxury Gold photographer recently accompanied some of our guests on the Treasures of the Incas journey, reminding me that it was high time to book my own holiday there later this year. Read on to discover the rich culture of this amazing destination and how Luxury Gold brings it to life.

Daniel shares insights into Inca history, Cusco

MEET YOUR TRAVELLING CONCIERGE

I was lucky enough to meet Daniel Pelaez, the Travelling Concierge who features in these photos, on a previous journey. Daniel's connections serve to enhance your journey – from recommending quieter restaurants for a romantic dinner in your free time to explaining more about the traditions of his country. Whether you're on a journey with Daniel or any one of our other fabulous Travelling Concierges, I know you will be in good hands.

MAKING TRAVEL MATTER

I find that meeting the recipients of TreadRight Foundation grants enriches a journey for me, so I'll be eager to hear more from Nilda Callañaupa Alvarez. An indigenous Quechua weaver, Nilda has succeeded in restoring weaving practices in her community and has partnered with other communities in the region too. We'll join Nilda at the Center for Traditional Textiles of Cusco, where she's director and founder, and see the artisan weavers at work creating vivid patterns with their stories.

A special way to connect with mother nature

A local shaman leads you in a Pachamama ceremony

A MYSTICAL CEREMONY

On day four, we'll participate in an ancient shamanic ritual that gives thanks to Mother Earth – Pachamama. An Andean high priest joins us in creating an offering of treasured Amazonian natural goods to bless and share with Mother Earth. Dating back thousands of years, this ceremony is about restoring the balance of nature. Joining this ancient tradition offers you a unique connection with the people, land and history of the Sacred Valley.

INKATERRA MACHU PICCHU PUEBLO HOTEL

This magnificent resort promises ultimate relaxation. Hidden in a cloud forest and across 12 acres of breathtaking natural beauty, you'll find charming adobe casitas in mountainside reserve near Machu Picchu. To relax after a day of exploring the ruins, I'll certainly take advantage of the UNU spa at the resort, which uses 100% natural products and a mystical Andean approach. The exfoliation with sacred cocoa leaves sounds truly wonderful.

On our first evening at the hotel, we'll learn how to blend the perfect pisco sour. As the spirit is native to Peru, there's no better place to hone our skills on this delicious aperitif as we get to know each other during a casual cocktail hour.

DISCOVER THE LOST CITY OF THE INCAS

Our Local Expert accompanies us on the short journey from the pueblo to mysterious Machu Picchu before the crowds ascend. This ancient city was abandoned 500 years ago and only rediscovered in 1911 by Hiram Bingham. I can't wait to hear more about its history and the traditions that the Inca have managed to pass on. As we're staying so close by, I'll return in the afternoon to wander the ruins alone and take in all that the Travelling Concierge has told me about this mesmerizing city.

MAP Café, Cusco

CUSCO

A highlight of travelling is the local gastronomy, so the wildly innovative meal at MAP Café, located in the glass conservatory at the Museum of Pre-Colombian Art sparks my interest. Service is impeccable here, and the attention to detail in each dish makes it an unmissable place to dine. The chefs use fresh local ingredients but combine them in surprising ways that continue to delight every diner who visits. I can't wait to sample a tender grilled alpaca or Cusquenian adobo.

YOUR PERUVIAN JOURNEY AWAITS

I'm grateful that others have tread this path before me, so I can look forward to a particularly fulfilling Peru experience. Having a Travelling Concierge by my side and everything handpicked to ensure my peace of mind will truly enhance my Treasure of the Incas journey. Peru is a place that can only truly be lived by learning from its people, food and culture and I look forward to immersing myself in it completely. ■

EUROPE & BRITAIN

Meet Andy Coulter, Edinburgh

Connect with the Sound of Scotland

Story by: Andy Coulter

Andy Coulter is a talented musician and fabulous storyteller, with funny anecdotes from his time in the army to the time he played at the Queen Mother's birthday party.

No one really knows how far the bagpipes go back. If you look at ancient history, you'll find records of pipes in Africa, France, Spain. However, they are a symbol of national pride in Scotland, and have been used for centuries as a military tool by our men.

Bagpipes have been in my family for several generations. Made in 1888, my pipes were passed down to me from my great grandfather. I play Great Highland Bagpipes, which are loud and suit the military very well. It's a double-reed woodwind instrument that has a bag that's placed under the arm, a chanter, a blowpipe, two tenor drones and a bass drone. If that's all gone totally over your head, come see me play and I'll be happy to show you.

My father, grandfather and great grandfather all played the pipes in the army. My grandfather fought with the Armed Forces from New Zealand in the First World War. On the beaches of Gallipoli, he played the pipes. We play to rouse morale and to keep the spirits up with tunes such as "The Black Bear," which is a lively hornpipe. Visitors who have had relatives at war will have heard stories about pipers on the battlefield.

Many Luxury Gold travellers have heritage in Scotland and I'm happy to answer questions about your ancestry or the clan you're from. If you'd like to know more about what bagpipers wear, or the significance of the sgian-dubh (the small knife we wear in our sock) then ask away – I encourage the interaction! We always have a fun night, filled with tales of Scotland, bygone battles and stirring tunes that have been played for 500 years or more.

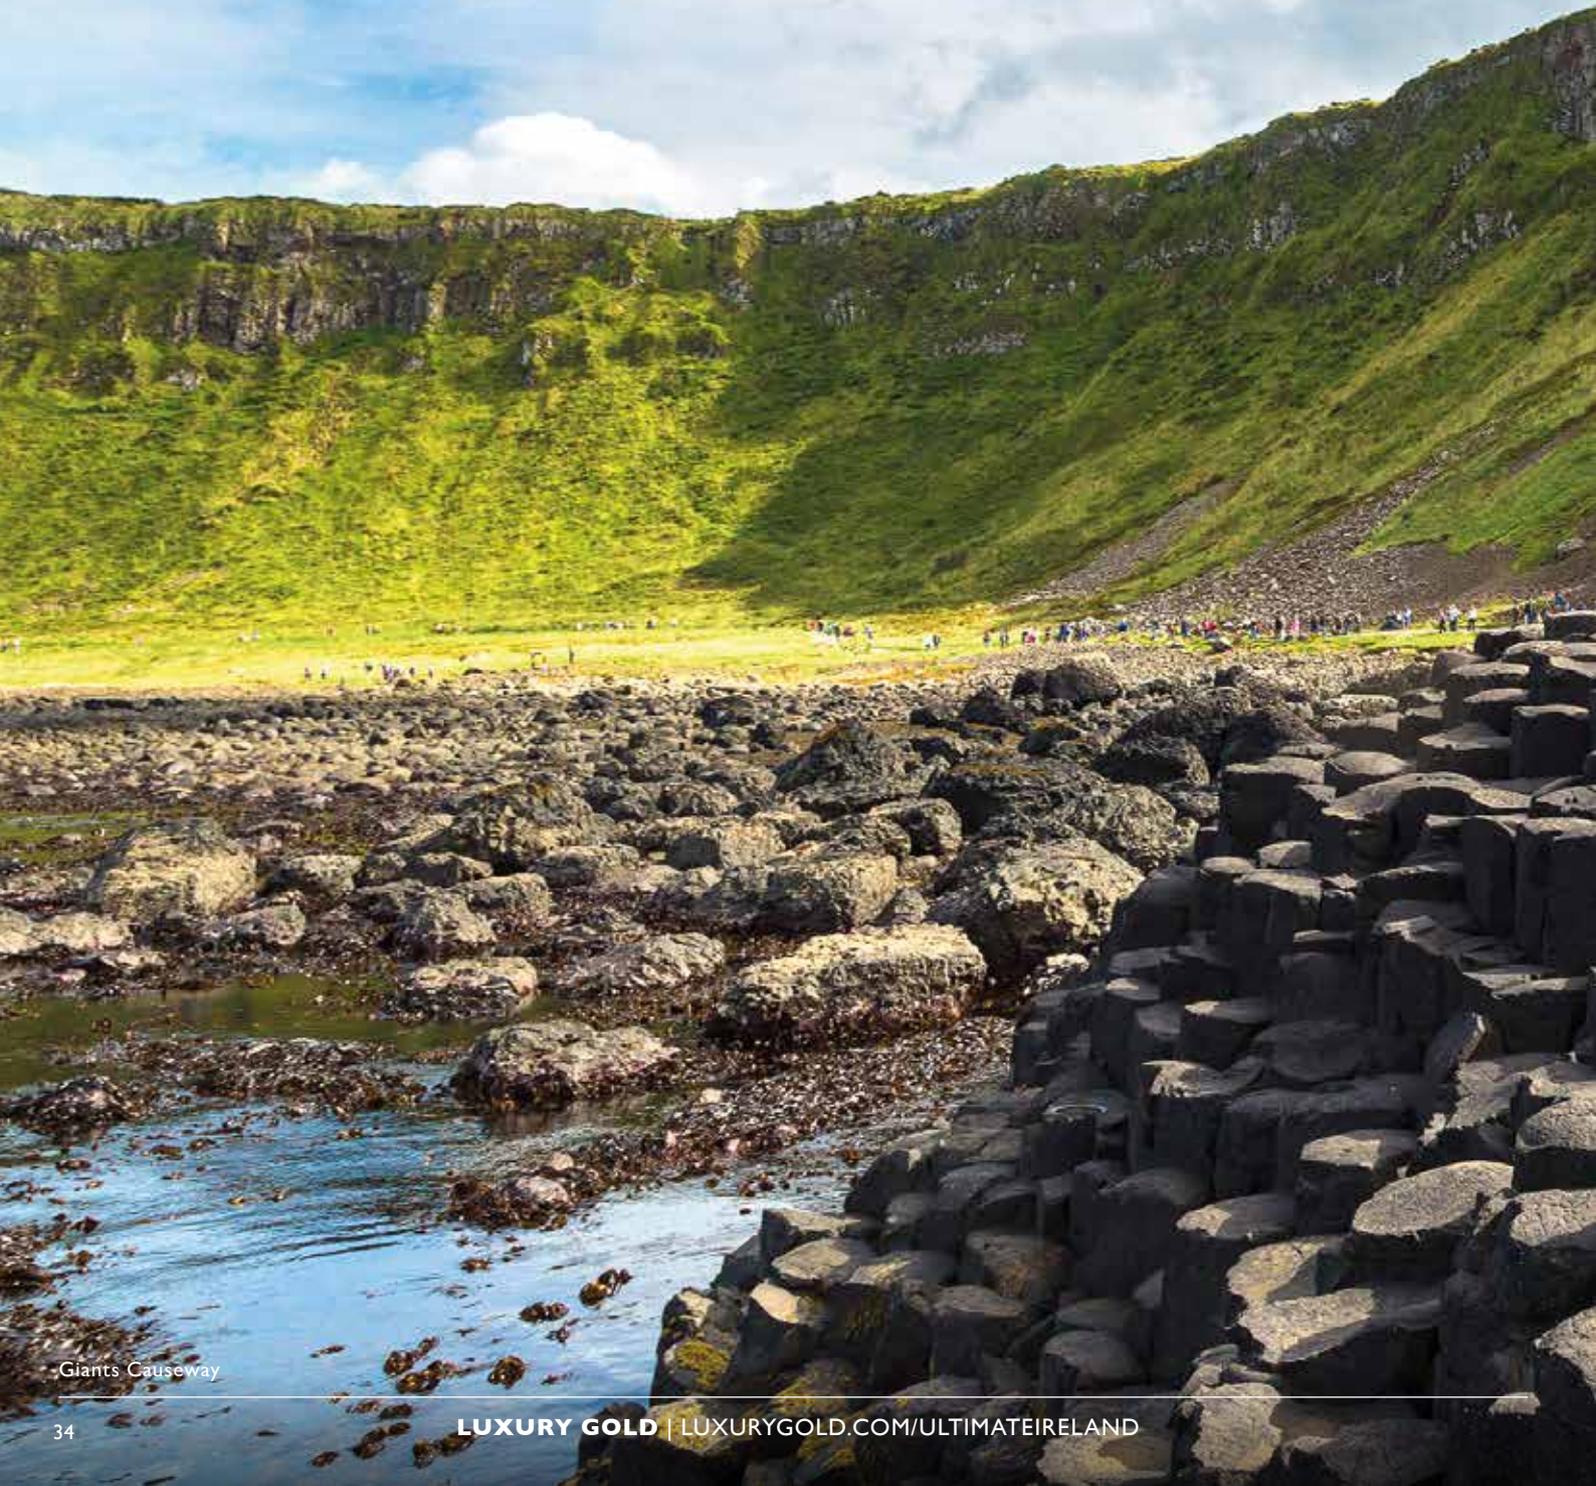

When you come to Scotland, you must experience live music. Find an old pub, come in out of the damp weather and listen to the fiddle, banjo and small pipes being played live in the corner. It's there you'll find the soul of the country. ■

Vermejo Park Ranch

Embrace the Bounty of Nature

Story by: Jade McBride

I grew up in a small farming community in Idaho, close to Yellowstone National Park, where we had a little cabin. My parents were great hosts, and they would invite friends and relatives to visit frequently, carefully considering their favourite activities and customising an itinerary just for them.

My parents' innate sense of hospitality and the extraordinary experiences that nature offers inspired my career path. When Ted Turner hired me as managing director for Vermejo Park Ranch, it felt like a homecoming, and I hope to spend the rest of my working life here.

Ted Turner, who you may know as the founder of CNN, bought this ranch in his drive for conservation. He intended to raise bison here but soon discovered that the breakdown of the ecosystem had contributed to their decline. He used his vast resources to hire an army of biologists as advisors and a staff of passionate caretakers to bring back the natural balance.

Now, not only do bison thrive on these 550,000 acres, but elk, black bears, bighorn sheep and wild horses do too. It's extraordinary what can be achieved when you have a passion for making a change in the world and the resources to make that happen.

A hunting and fishing destination for 120 years, Vermejo was previously only accessible to select visitors. Ted's idea for opening it as a hospitality venture came about solely from his desire to protect it as a natural reserve. Your patronage directly funds the amazing work here so it can continue for years to come.

At his own insistence, our owner and friend tells everyone to call him Ted, never Mr. Turner. Everything is personal here, which is our philosophy. When you arrive at Vermejo, you're greeted on the driveway like an old friend coming to visit. You will truly feel like you're entering someone's home, and we encourage you to be comfortable here.

Of course, there are some luxurious touches. You will sleep on exquisitely soft cotton and dine on the freshest ingredients, straight from the greenhouse and ranch, served on the finest china (you're visiting Ted's ranch after all). But the true luxury lies with the opportunity to immerse yourself in the beauty of nature and appreciate what's really important, without the daily distractions. ■

Choosing responsible travel companies means that you have already made a difference. You know that your travel dollars are supporting more sustainable travel and aligning with your own values.

Support Ancient Cultures Through Sustainable Travel

Story by Shannon Guihan,
Chief TreadRight and Sustainability Officer, The Travel Corporation

I grew up in Paradise. Yes, that's the name of my hometown in Newfoundland & Labrador, Canada's most eastern province. The tourism industry was beginning to boom when I was in my teens and while it brought jobs and growth into our economy, I quickly saw how destructive it could be – if managed poorly – to such a rugged natural landscape. From my first job as a sea kayaking guide, I wanted people to see that tourism doesn't own a place, but it should bear responsibility to it. I wanted travellers to treat my home as they would their own.

That first job left an impact, and so I carried on to earn a master's degree in Tourism and Environmental Management, seeking to understand how a place becomes a destination. I spent the next 10 years working for multiple tour operators and a hotel realty consultancy, always with a focus on destination health and resiliency. Eventually TTC became a client of mine, and I was impressed by their commitment to change.

A Commitment to Sustainability

TTC appointed me as chief sustainability officer, and we've focused on ensuring that our three major pillars, designed to Make Travel Matter, are integrated into our organisation.

These three pillars are the Planet, People and Wildlife and they guide our business's sustainability efforts as well as the priorities of our TreadRight Foundation. To date, we've partnered with more than 55 projects across the world in local communities and critical areas. You can find inspiration daily when you hear about the great work being carried out, from Wildlife SOS in India, which advocates against the cruel practice of riding elephants, to Proyecto Tití in Colombia, which protects the endangered cotton-top tamarin.

When you travel with Luxury Gold, you have the opportunity to be part of this too. You can meet with the people who run these initiatives and learn about what they do. Choosing responsible travel companies means that you have already made a difference. You know that your travel dollars are supporting more sustainable travel and aligning with your own values.

Preserving Ancient Weaving Traditions in Cusco

In Peru, you'll find the legendary Nilda Callañaupa Alvarez, who founded the Center for Traditional Textiles in Cusco. This is a project that was started for women, by women and is managed by women. The weavers here are steeped in an Andean tradition that is 10,000 years old; they are preserving that for the future, while also offering the opportunity for young women to stay in the community, rather than leave to find employment.

When you meet someone like Ingracia Quispe Castro, who has been a weaver for more than 45 years, you begin to understand the impact this has. This project has allowed her to support her family and educate her children.

With the help of the TreadRight Foundation, the Center for Traditional Textiles in Cusco has built a living museum and is helping more travellers understand the significance of weaving in this community. They can hear from the women and see children as young as seven learning the craft.

Support Indigenous Communities

Meeting local people is an enriching part of any journey, but truly understanding how they live is a humbling experience. Our travellers who have had the opportunity to visit Cusco are rewarded with a true appreciation of the sense of community and realize that supporting these local artisans is key to preserving their culture. The ladies in Cusco love sharing their history and craft with visitors, and they're grateful that they can keep their traditions alive without compromise.

Our travellers have chosen to take the pledge to Make Travel Matter and that's more important now than ever before. ■

Delhi spice market

“On any journey, food is the most important part.”

Discover food culture in Delhi

Story by: Rajeev Goyal

Chef Rajeev, a food connoisseur who has worked with many famous chefs around the world, takes you on a street food tour of Delhi, explaining how every spice has a purpose in Indian cooking.

My passion for food has always been inspired by one question, why? As the youngest child, my mother brought me into the kitchen at an early age and encouraged me to find the stories behind each ingredient and dish, and that is something that I've continued to do.

Preparing and eating food is not simply about feeding people. There are many layers behind why each dish exists, just like building the layers of spice in Indian food. Alongside gaining my hospitality qualifications, I sought out the elders of the community and consulted them on when and why they added particular herbs and spices, constantly questioning to discover the secrets of regional and local specialties.

When you visit as a Luxury Gold guest, I take you on a street-food tour with its own storyline. I encourage you to be as interactive as possible, so that I can personalise the experience for you. If you're a foodie, I'll happily advise what to add to your own cooking at home. After learning about the ways in which we pair food here – why we use bread with curry, why pickles work well with basmati rice and yoghurt – we taste delicacies from stall holders that can't be found anywhere outside India.

The global impression of Indian food is remarkably different from the food that you'll find on the streets of Delhi. For one, I would say street food is fresher. Stall holders have learned to work with what is in season. They can't keep things in huge freezers and their food moves quickly.

Different dietary trends that are growing in popularity across the world have already been in place for thousands of years here. Vegetarian food? We have hundreds of time-proven recipes. Using food to heal? Many of the ingredients used come straight from our trading routes. We use certain ingredients as a prevention, rather than a cure, taking herbs and spices such as garam masala to aid digestion, turmeric as an anti-inflammatory and anti-oxidant, and basil to boost the immune system. These aren't just added for flavour; there is a real purpose behind each pinch. Luckily, the resulting dishes taste fantastic.

On any journey, food is the most important part. You may visit magnificent temples and follow great rivers once, but you will have at least three meals every day. That is why it is vital to understand the food culture of a destination, as that's where you'll find the soul of a place. ■

AFRICA

Luxor, Egypt

“Sharing all the knowledge that I have learned as an Egyptologist is a true passion of mine.”

Discover the Majesty of Luxor Temple

Travelling Concierge Hazem Khalaf holds a master's degree in Egyptology and delights in accompanying you on your Egyptian journey.

I've always been fascinated by ancient Egypt. My biggest inspiration has been Dr. Zahi Hawass, the former Minister of Antiquities and chief archaeologist of many great discoveries, such as in Giza. I was lucky enough to attend his lectures throughout my studies, so I've learned much about Luxor from a renowned expert.

Luxor Temple is one of the most important archaeological sites in Egypt. Designated a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 1979, it is astonishingly well-preserved and a huge tourist attraction with visitors from all over the world. The remarkable juxtaposition of the temple with the modern city of Luxor is a breathtaking sight and its picturesque location on the East Bank of the legendary Nile river adds to the allure.

The main parts of the temple were constructed by New Kingdom pharaohs Amenhotep III and Ramesses II around 3,500 years ago, while Tutankhamun completed it a century later. Comprising almost two football fields in length, this massive open-air museum holds an abundance of statues and carvings from Ancient Egypt.

As a Luxury Gold guest, you are privy to an extra special experience at the Luxor Temple. After the temple is closed to the public, we are invited to marvel at the many inscriptions and gigantic statues of ancient Pharaohs. The sight of the sun setting over the open-air museum is spectacular, with the columns stark against the dusky sky.

You can capture fantastic photos as the lights twinkle along the striking Avenue of Sphinxes, without the hassle of the crowds of tourists that attend daily. It's easier to really appreciate the mesmerising hieroglyphics in the Tomb of Ramses VI when you have the peace and quiet to do so, and I love describing the numerous fascinating stories depicted on these walls.

Luxor Temple contains both a Roman Catholic church and a mosque, which is still in use today, making it the oldest building in the world that is open for purposes other than tourism or archaeology. I believe this demonstrates the importance of the temple and its antiquities to people of every faith and race – this history belongs to all of us, not just Egypt.

Sharing all the knowledge that I have learned as an Egyptologist is a true passion of mine. Seeing the wonder in travellers' eyes and deepening their understanding of the mighty Pharaohs is a gift that I get to experience with every Luxury Gold journey.

Mount Fuji

“Our children were rendered speechless when Mt. Fuji came into view, as the unspoiled Japanese landscape flew by, sitting in this feat of engineering”

Our Japan Family Holiday – An Adventure for the Senses

Story by: Brett Tollman, TTC CEO

When we proposed a holiday in Japan to our children, we were thrilled at the reaction of unified excitement. Let’s face it, igniting the eagerness of three very different teenagers is a tall order. We had great anticipation for the culture, art, food and fashion, as we took off on the adventure of a lifetime, encompassing Tokyo, Kyoto and Hiroshima.

All Human Life is Here

It’s easy to pack your days in Tokyo, with so much to eat, see and do. At the “Team Borderless” Mori Digital Art Museum, we were transported by digital landscapes of fluorescent marine life and endless glowing lanterns. We walked through the Imperial Palace Gardens, lit prayer candles at the Sensoji Temple and marveled at the enormous scope of the city from the Tokyo Skytree building.

We obsessed over matcha soft serve ice cream daily, binged on large brothy bowls of ramen at Ippudo (a local haunt recommended by our guide) and delighted in an afternoon spent at a sushi-making class. A master sushi chef taught us how to hand roll maki and nigiri, amid much fun banter and we then enjoyed a delicious fresh lunch of our creations.

Spiritual Fulfilment in Kyoto

When it was time to make our way to Kyoto, we boarded the high speed, immaculately clean Shinkansen (bullet train), which is an experience in itself. Our children were rendered speechless when Mt. Fuji came into view, as the unspoiled Japanese landscape flew by, sitting in this feat of engineering.

Where Tokyo is the ever-beating heart of Japan, Kyoto is the soul. One of my favourite sites to visit in Kyoto is the Sanjusangendo Hall; a lengthy chamber that houses 1,001 life-sized Buddhas dating back to the 12th century. After, we travelled to the golden Kinkakuji Temple, for a hike through the lush forest to the famous monkey park. We fed doe-eyed beauties at the Deer Park in Nara and captured some amazing family photos with the world’s largest bronze Buddha Vairocana.

A Sobering Reminder

Arriving in Hiroshima, our mood became more somber. We spent an afternoon at the UNESCO World Heritage Site of Peace Memorial Park and Museum. Our teenagers came to truly understand the impact of war here, stunned at the aftermath of the first atomic bomb. It is both a beautiful and sobering tribute to those who perished.

Japan was a wonderful, eye-opening journey for our family. The diversity of each place provides the opportunity to experience something amazing daily. We were touched by the natural hospitality of the Japanese and all our family can’t wait to go back. ■

AUSTRALIA & NEW ZEALAND

New Zealand Rugby, Auckland

Playing with the Pride of the Nation

“Buck” Shelford, former captain of the All Blacks, the national rugby team of New Zealand, joins you for a Celebration Dinner in Auckland to discuss his rugby career and the significance of the haka.

Story by Wayne “Buck” Shelford

I grew up in a sporty family in Rotorua, on New Zealand’s north island. My mum’s brothers played rugby, my father played, my older brothers played – it’s more unusual in New Zealand that you don’t play. Some people would say it is part of our DNA. As kids we’d think nothing of spending hours travelling to away games – that sort of commitment was in our blood.

Rugby arrived in New Zealand in 1870, introduced by British settlers. Before that, the Maori played a ball game not entirely dissimilar to rugby, which might be why we’ve adapted to it so well. North Shore in Devonport, where I coach now, will celebrate its 150th anniversary in three years’ time, so many generations have played here.

Before each game, a Ka Mate haka is performed, which is a Maori ceremonial dance. A haka can be performed for many reasons – to mark an achievement or to pay respect to the dead. It is far more than a battle cry, even though that’s how it’s been perceived. Although often misunderstood, the haka is performed with great sincerity and honour. It is a stamp of our identity – of how we do things differently down here.

When you visit New Zealand, I’d encourage you to immerse yourself in Maori culture. Many Maori exist with one foot in our culture and one foot in another. You can appreciate the symbols and the body art, but you don’t realise that these tell a story. The art on my wife’s face and body explains her whole genealogy. Maori have rich ties to the world around us and look at the world differently than most western cultures.

Rugby opened up the world for me, so I’ll forever be grateful for that. I feel proud to have represented both my culture and country on an international stage. Winning the inaugural World Cup in Eden Park, Auckland was undeniably the highlight of my career. It’s a great honour to have worn the black jersey, and winning in front of a home crowd, where everyone has such passion for the game, is an extraordinary feeling. ■
